

DECISION AND FINDINGS

Date of adoption: 13 February 2020

Case no. 2016-10

Dragiša Kostić

Against

EULEX

The Human Rights Review Panel, sitting on 13 February 2020 with the following members present:

Mr Guénaël METTRAUX, Presiding Member
Mr Petko PETKOV, Member
Ms Anna AUTIO, Member

Assisted by:
Mr Ronald HOOGHIEMSTRA, Legal Officer

Having considered the aforementioned complaint, introduced pursuant to Council Joint Action 2008/124/CFSP of 4 February 2008, the EULEX Accountability Concept of 29 October 2009 on the establishment of the Human Rights Review Panel and the Rules of Procedure of the Panel as last amended on 11 December 2019,

Having deliberated, decides as follows:

I. PROCEEDINGS BEFORE THE PANEL

1. The complaint in this case was registered on 30 June 2016.
2. On 28 June 2017, the Panel requested this and other complainants to provide additional information regarding their complaints. The complainant initially responded through the representative for Serb families of the Missing Persons Resource Center (MPRC), an NGO based in Pristina, that he had no further information in relation to this case.
3. On 20 September and 17 October 2017, the Panel sent two further requests for additional information via the representative of the MPRC.

4. On 20 October 2017, the Panel received a response through the representative of the MPRC providing additional information in relation to two cases, including the present one.
5. On 8 December 2017, the Panel transmitted a Statement of Facts and Questions to the Head of Mission (HoM), EULEX Kosovo, inviting the Mission to submit answers and written observations on the complaints.
6. The observations of the HoM were received on 19 April 2019 after which they were communicated to the complainants for additional observations.
7. The complainant did not submit any additional observations.
8. On 19 June 2019, the Panel rendered its admissibility decision in this case, declaring the complaint admissible in respect of Articles 2, 3, 8 and 13 of the European Convention of Human Rights (hereafter, “the European Convention” or “the Convention”) (<https://hrrp.eu/docs/decisions/2019-06-19%20Admissibility%20Decision%202016-10.pdf>).
9. In that Decision the Panel invited the parties to address the following queries:

I. TO THE HEAD OF MISSION:

- i. Was the Mission aware of this case? If so, under what circumstances did it become aware of it?
- ii. Did the Mission receive, as the complainant alleges, an ante-mortem report and an UNMIK victim form? If so, when and under what circumstances?
- iii. What steps, if any, did the Mission take to investigate this case?
- iv. What contacts, if any, did the Mission have with the relatives of the disappeared and, in particular, with the complainant?
- v. Did the Mission keep the relatives of the disappeared informed of their investigative efforts (if any)? If so, when, by what means and what information was provided?
- vi. Was the case-file pertaining to this case transmitted to local authorities? If so, when?

II. TO THE COMPLAINANT:

- i. What contact, if any, did you have with the EULEX Mission or its representatives? If so, when? If not, why?
- ii. Are you aware of any efforts by local authorities to investigate this case?
- iii. Has the Mission violated or contributed to the violation of the complainant’s rights under Articles 2, 3, 8 and 13 of the Convention? If so, in what manner?
- iv. What are the consequences – personal, financial and emotional – associated with the disappearance of your relative?

II. COMPOSITION OF THE PANEL

10. Following the resignation of one of its permanent members, the departing member was replaced by Ms Autio upon her appointment to the Panel in accordance with Rule 14 of the Panel's Rules of Procedure. In order to ensure full familiarity with the case, Ms Autio acquainted herself with the full record of the case, including as regards its admissibility, and is therefore fully able to participate in the deliberations of this case.

III. FACTS

11. The facts as presented by the complainant may be summarised as follows:
12. On or about 17 June 1999, Svetozar Stambolić, the father of the complainant, Dragiša Kostić, was allegedly "dragged alive" behind a tractor in the village of Novo Selo Mađunsko, Vucitrn/Vushtri Municipality.
13. The residents of the village were forced to flee their homes and village on that date, but Svetozar Stambolić had remained in the village. He was never seen again and his disappearance was reported to the authorities.
14. When EULEX came to replace UNMIK in the period December 2008 - March 2009, an Ante Mortem Investigation Report referring to the disappearance of Svetozar Stambolić was said to have been transferred to EULEX.
15. The Mission is also said to have received an Interpol 'Disaster Victim Identification' form filled with his details. The report indicated that UNMIK interviewed the complainant and another family member of Mr Stambolić by telephone at an unspecified date in 2005.

IV. SUBMISSIONS OF THE PARTIES

The complainant

16. The complainant alleges that, in the exercise of its executive mandate, EULEX should have investigated the disappearance of his relative and culpably failed to do so in violation of his and his grandfather's fundamental rights. The Panel should indicate here that it is only able to address the present complaint to the extent that it pertains to the complainant's fundamental rights

Head of Mission ("HoM")

17. On 24 September 2019, the Panel received the HoM's submissions regarding the merit of this case.
18. The Panel asked the following:

'Was the Mission aware of this case? If so, under what circumstances did it become aware of it?'
19. In response, the HoM submitted that the Mission circumstances became aware of the disappearance of Mr Stambolić following the hand-over of cases and case files from UNMIK to EULEX in the period December 2008 – March 2009. A 2005 UNMIK Police War Crimes „Ante Mortem Investigation Report" referring to the disappearance in question was transferred to WCIU at EULEX and the Mission's staff at the Institute of Forensic Medicine received an Interpol „Disaster Victim Identification" form with details. This form, according to the response of the HoM is a standard Interpol template, used to collect basic information about missing persons. In that specific case it was collected by the ICRC Mitrovica in 2003.

20. The Panel asked then the following:
21. 'What steps, if any, did the Mission take to investigate the case?'
22. The Mission replied that EULEX did not investigate the case. The Mission explained that its resources were not unlimited and that it could not investigate each and every case of disappearance.
23. Furthermore the Mission indicated that it did not have any contact with the relatives of the disappeared person. The Mission said that the complainant himself does not appear to have ever contacted EULEX to report the disappearance of his grandfather.
24. The HoM also indicated that the case was handed over to the Kosovo Police at the end of 2018.
25. The HoM further observed that an assessment of the responsibility of the Mission under Article 2 (procedural limb) and Article 3 of the European Convention 'cannot disregard the context and the circumstances in which the Mission was called to implement its mandate'. The Mission further highlighted in that context a number of challenges it faced at the time, including the number of cases to address, the state of the files received from UNMIK, limitations of resources, the timeframe of its mandate and the steps taken by the Mission to organise the records received from UNMIK. Of particular relevance to the present case, the Mission makes the following submissions, which the Panel reproduces verbatim:

„ ...when it comes to assessing whether its conduct infringed upon the complainant's rights EULEX disputes the idea that the failure to investigate an alleged enforced disappearance can by itself lead to the violation of human rights, when such failure materializes in a context of large scale crimes involving thousands of victims where it is clear that no investigative authority may be expected to resolve all cases brought before it. This consideration applies a fortiori to a situation where the authority responsible is not a State, but an international Mission with limited resources at its disposal and a time-limited mandate (since its interception in 2008 EULEX mandate has been extended every two years). The nature of the overall circumstances in which EULEX was called to implement its mandate required the prioritization of some cases over others. As far as criminal investigations are concerned, overall the Mission prioritized on the one hand the around 1200 case-files that had already been labelled by UNMIK as „war crimes file” over so called „missing persons files”, and within the former category, the cases that appeared more promising in terms of investigation outcomes. Its staff at the Institute of Forensic Medicine on the other hand, has taken action upon each and every single credible information on potential grave-sites and has examined any remains found with a view to identify missing persons and thereby bring some relief to their relatives.”

Submissions from the complainant

26. No further submission was received from the complainant.

V. DELIBERATIONS

“Enforced disappearance” as a grave violation of the victims' fundamental rights

27. The practice of enforced disappearance is one of the most egregious human rights violations. Enforced disappearances generally involve the violation of not one type of right but many, including in many instances, the right to truth, the right to recognition as a person before the law, the right to liberty and security of the person and the right not to be subjected to torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment, the right to an effective remedy and such conduct violates or constitutes a grave threat to the right to life. See, e.g., Sadiku-Syla against EULEX, 2014-34, Decision and Findings, 19 October 2016, para. 33; S.H. against EULEX, Decision and Findings, case no. 2016-28, 11 September 2019, para. 61; Declaration on the Protection of All Persons from Enforced Disappearance, A/RES/47/133, 18 December 1992.
28. Particularly important in that context is the complainant's right to truth, i.e., the right of victims to know what happened to their close relatives and the circumstances under which their relatives were made to disappear. See, in general, S.H. against EULEX, Decision and Findings, case no. 2016-28, 11 September 2019, para. 62; Desanka and Zoran Stanisić against EULEX, 2012-22, 11 November 2015, para. 67; see also El-Masri v The Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Application no. 39630/09, ECtHR Judgment of 12 December 2012, paras 191-193; Orhan v. Turkey, Application no. 25656/94, ECtHR Judgment of 18 June 2002, para. 358; Imakayeva v. Russia, Application no. 7615/02, ECtHR Judgment of 9 November 2006, para 164; Velásquez Rodríguez v. Honduras, Judgment of 29 July 1988, para. 181; Heliodoro Portugal v. Panama, Judgment of 12 August 2008, para. 244; Anzualdo Castro v. Peru, judgment of 22 September 2009, paras. 116-118; General Comment on the Right to the Truth in Relation to Enforced Disappearance, Report of the Working Group on Enforced or Involuntary Disappearances, 2010, in particular, para. 1, Document A/HRC/16/48; Set of principles for the protection and promotion of human rights through action to combat impunity (E/CN.4/2005/102/Add.1), in particular, Principles 2-4; and, also, International Convention for the Protection of All Persons from Enforced Disappearance, adopted 20 December 2006, in particular, Preamble and art. 24(2); and, for an illustration, Case of Gudiel Alvarez et al. ("Diario Militar") v. Guatemala (Jdgt of 20.11.2012; Merits, Reparations and costs), para. 301 (and references cited).
29. For almost two decades, the complainant has lived with the uncertainty regarding the fate of her father, what happened to him and in what circumstances he disappeared. The psychological suffering resulting from this is not just immense. It is ongoing. See also S.H. against EULEX, Decision and Findings, case no. 2016-28, 11 September 2019, para. 63; D.W., E.V., F.U., G.T., Zlata Veselinović, H.S., I.R. against EULEX, 2014-11 to 2014-17, Decision on Admissibility, 30 September 2015, para. 78; Sadiku-Syla against EULEX, 2014-34, Decision on Admissibility, 29 September 2015, paras. 35 and 42. See also, in the context of Article 3, ECtHR, Kurt v. Turkey, judgment of 25 May 1998, Reports of Judgments and Decisions 1998- III, paras. 130-34; Khadzhaliyev and Others v. Russia, Application no. 3013/04, Judgment of 6 November 2008, paras. 120-121; Timurtas v Turkey, Application no. 23531/94, Judgment of 13 June 2000, para. 95; Resolution No. 828 of 1984, paragraph 3 (Parliamentary Assembly of the Council of Europe); and General Comment on article 17 of the Declaration, Report of the Working Group on Enforced or Involuntary Disappearances 2000. Document E/CN.4/2001/68

(referring and commenting upon Article 17(1) of the Declaration on the Protection of All Persons from Enforced Disappearance).

30. The continuous nature of the violation of rights involved in such practice explains that the duty of the competent authorities to investigate these is a pressing and important obligation that can only be set aside or delayed in the narrowest of circumstances. See S.H. against EULEX, Decision and Findings, case no. 2016-28, 11 September 2019, para. 64.
31. The right to truth in relation to human rights violations is not only an individual right. It is also a collective right, serving to preserve memory at the level of society and acting as a safeguard against the recurrence of violations. See General Comment on the Right to the Truth in Relation to Enforced Disappearance, Report of the Working Group on Enforced or Involuntary Disappearances (2010), Document A/HRC/16/48, Preamble. In the post-conflict context of Kosovo, investigations of enforced disappearances contributed – and continue to contribute – to promoting truth, to the collective memory of such human rights violations, and to ensuring their non-recurrence.
32. When it comes to investigating cases of enforced disappearance, an investigation should be started as soon as possible and delays avoided as much as possible. That is not just because of the effect of the uncertainty upon surviving relatives. It is also because evidence will disappear or get lost and memory fades. Delays in investigations are therefore likely to negatively affect the possibility of an investigation establishing the circumstances under which a person has disappeared and bring culprits to justice. For illustrations of the application of this guarantee in different contexts, see generally: S.H. against EULEX, Decision and Findings, case no. 2016-28, 11 September 2019, para. 65; Gürtekin and Others v. Cyprus, ECtHR Inadmissibility Decision of 11 March 2014; Al-Skeini and Others v. the United Kingdom [GC], Application no. 55721/07, ECtHR Judgment of 7 July 2011; Jaloud v. The Netherlands [GC], Application no. 47708/08, ECtHR Judgment of 20 November 2011; Jelić v. Croatia, Application no. 57856/11, ECtHR Judgment of 12 June 2014; B. and Others v. Croatia, Application no. 71593/11, ECtHR Judgment of 18 June 2015; Palić v. Bosnia and Herzegovina, Application no. 4704/04, ECtHR Judgment of 15 February 2011; Lejla Fazlić and Others v. Bosnia and Herzegovina and 4 Others, Applications nos. 66758/09, 66762/09, 7965/10, 9149/10 and 12451/10, ECtHR Judgment of 3 June 2014; Mujkanović and Others v. Bosnia and Herzegovina, Applications no. 47063/08 et al., ECtHR Inadmissibility Decision of 3 June 2014; Nježić and Štimac v. Croatia, Application no. 29823/13, ECtHR Judgment of 9 April 2015.

Duties and obligations of the authorities regarding acts of enforced disappearance

33. The actions of the EULEX prosecutors and police form part of the executive mandate of EULEX Kosovo in the justice, police and customs sectors. As such, they fall within the ambit of the mandate of the Panel (see, for instance, K to T against EULEX, 2013-05 to 2013-14, 21 April 2015, para. 43; Krlić against EULEX, 2012-21, 26 August 2014, para. 23; Y against EULEX, 2011-28, 15 November 2012, para. 35). This is the case whether the underlying conduct in question consists of a positive act or a culpable omission by the Mission. See Krlic against EULEX, 26 August 2014, para. 25; S.H. against EULEX, Decision and Findings, case no. 2016-28, 11 September 2019, para. 48.

34. The Panel has already had occasion to note that the EULEX Mission is not a State and that its ability to guarantee the effective protection of human rights cannot be compared in all relevant respects to what may be expected of a State (see, e.g., the Panel's decision in A,B,C,D against EULEX, 2012-09 to 2012-12, 20 June 2013, para. 50; K to T against EULEX, quoted above, para. 53; see also Human Rights Advisory Panel of UNMIK (HRAP) decision in cases nos 248/09, 250/09 and 251/09, 25 April 2013, para. 35; S.H. against EULEX, Decision and Findings, case no. 2016-28, 11 September 2019, para. 49).
35. Expectations placed upon the ability of EULEX to investigate and resolve complex criminal cases should therefore be realistic and not place upon EULEX a disproportionate burden that its mandate and resources could not reasonably be expected to meet (L.O. against EULEX, 2014-32, Decision and Findings, 11 November 2015, paras. 43 and 45, and its references to: Panel's decision in A,B,C,D against EULEX, 2012- 09 to 2012-12, 20 June 2013, para 50; K to T against EULEX, 2013-05 to 2013-14, 21 April 2015, para. 53; Sadiku-Syla against EULEX, 2014-34, Decision on Admissibility, 29 September 2015, paras. 35-37; D.W., E.V., F.U., G.T., Zlata Veselinović, H.S., I.R. against EULEX, 2014-11 to 2014-17, Decision on Admissibility, 30 September 2015, paras. 72-74; see also HRAP decision in cases nos 248/09, 250/09 and 251/09, 25 April 2013, para. 35 and paras 70-71).
36. In each case, the Panel is therefore expected to review whether there were concrete and real obstacles that might have undermined the capacity of EULEX to conduct a prompt and effective investigation of a case. Such an evaluation is not intended to justify operational shortcomings unrelated to concrete and demonstrable challenges. (See L.O. against EULEX, 2014-32, Decision and Findings, 11 November 2015, para. 44; S.H. against EULEX, Decision and Findings, case no. 2016-28, 11 September 2019, para. 50).
37. In every case, in particular instances of this seriousness, investigative authorities are expected to act with reasonable diligence and expeditiousness and to invest resources commensurate with the necessity and possibility of resolving the case. Whilst no investigative authority may be expected to resolve all cases brought before it, it is expected to act with such diligence, promptness and effectiveness as reflects the gravity of the matter under investigation (L.O. against EULEX, 2014-32, Decision and Findings, 11 November 2015, paras. 46 and 59; see also Varnava and Others v. Turkey, Application no. 16064/90 et al, Judgment of 18 September 2009, para. 191; Palić v. Bosnia and Herzegovina, Application no. 4704/04, Judgment of 15 February 2011, para. 63; S.H. against EULEX, Decision and Findings, case no. 2016-28, 11 September 2019, para. 54).
38. The European Court of Human Rights has laid down a number of general principles that provide guidance regarding what human rights law requires and expects of an effective investigation into allegations of rights violations under Article 2 of the European Convention (Mustafa Tunç and Fecire Tunç v. Turkey, Application no. 24014/05, Judgment, 14 April 2015 (Grand Chamber), paras 169ff):

“169. ... The investigation must be, inter alia, thorough, impartial and careful (see McCann and Others v. the United Kingdom, 27 September 1995, §§ 161-163, Series A no. 324).

170. The form of investigation required by this obligation varies according to the nature of the infringement of life: although a criminal investigation is generally necessary where death is caused intentionally, civil or even disciplinary proceedings may satisfy this requirement where death occurs as a result of negligence (see, inter alia, Calvelli and Ciglio v. Italy, cited above, § 51; Mastromatteo v. Italy [GC], no. 37703/97, § 90, ECHR 2002-VIII; and Vo v. France, cited above, § 90).

171. By requiring a State to take appropriate steps to safeguard the lives of those within its jurisdiction, Article 2 imposes a duty on that State to secure the right to life by putting in place effective criminal-law provisions to deter the commission of offences against the person, backed up by law-enforcement machinery for the prevention, suppression and punishment of breaches of such provisions. This obligation requires by implication that there should be some form of effective official investigation when there is reason to believe that an individual has sustained life-threatening injuries in suspicious circumstances, even where the presumed perpetrator of the fatal attack is not a State agent (see Menson v. the United Kingdom (dec.), no. 47916/99, ECHR 2003-V; Pereira Henriques v. Luxembourg, no. 60255/00, § 56, 9 May 2006; and Yotova v. Bulgaria, no. 43606/04, § 68, 23 October 2012).

172. In order to be ‘effective’ as this expression is to be understood in the context of Article 2 of the Convention, an investigation must firstly be adequate (see Ramsahai and Others v. the Netherlands [GC], no. 52391/99, § 324, ECHR 2007-II). That is, it must be capable of leading to the establishment of the facts and, where appropriate, the identification and punishment of those responsible.

173. The obligation to conduct an effective investigation is an obligation not of result but of means: the authorities must take the reasonable measures available to them to secure evidence concerning the incident at issue (see Jaloud v. the Netherlands [GC], no. 47708/08, § 186, ECHR 2014; and Nachova and Others v. Bulgaria [GC], nos. 43577/98 and 43579/98, § 160, ECHR 2005-VII).

174. In any event, the authorities must take whatever reasonable steps they can to secure the evidence concerning the incident, including, inter alia, eyewitness testimony, forensic evidence and, where appropriate, an autopsy which provides a complete and accurate record of injury and an objective analysis of clinical findings, including the cause of death. Any deficiency in the investigation which undermines its ability to establish the cause of death or the person responsible will risk falling foul of this standard (see Giuliani and Gaggio v. Italy [GC], no. 23458/02, § 301, ECHR 2011).

175. In particular, the investigation’s conclusions must be based on thorough, objective and impartial analysis of all relevant elements. Failing to follow an obvious line of inquiry undermines to a decisive extent the investigation’s ability to establish the circumstances of the case and, where appropriate, the identity of those responsible (see Kolevi v. Bulgaria, no. 1108/02, § 201, 5 November 2009).

176. Nevertheless, the nature and degree of scrutiny which satisfy the minimum threshold of the investigation’s effectiveness depend on the circumstances of the particular case. It is not possible to reduce the variety of situations which might occur to a bare check-list of acts of investigation or other simplified criteria (see Tanrikulu v. Turkey [GC], no. 23763/94, §§ 101-110, ECHR 1999-IV; and Velikova v. Bulgaria, no. 41488/98, § 80, ECHR 2000-VI).

177. Moreover, the persons responsible for the investigations should be independent of anyone implicated or likely to be implicated in the events. This means not only a lack of hierarchical or institutional connection but also a practical independence (see Anguelova v. Bulgaria, no. 38361/97, § 138, ECHR 2002-IV).

178. A requirement of promptness and reasonable expedition is implicit in this context (see Al-Skeini and Others, cited above, § 167).

179. In addition, the investigation must be accessible to the victim's family to the extent necessary to safeguard their legitimate interests. There must also be a sufficient element of public scrutiny of the investigation, the degree of which may vary from case to case (see Hugh Jordan v. the United Kingdom, no. 24746/94, § 109, ECHR 2001-III). The requisite access of the public or the victim's relatives may, however, be provided for in other stages of the procedure (see, among other authorities, Giuliani and Gaggio, cited above, § 304; and McKerr v. the United Kingdom, no. 28883/95, § 129, ECHR 2001-III).

180. Article 2 does not impose a duty on the investigating authorities to satisfy every request for a particular investigative measure made by a relative in the course of the investigation (see Ramsahai and Others, cited above, § 348; and Velcea and Mazăre v. Romania, no. 64301/01, § 113, 1 December 2009).

181. The question of whether an investigation has been sufficiently effective must be assessed on the basis of all relevant facts and with regard to the practical realities of investigation work (see Dobriyeva and Others v. Russia, no. 18407/10, § 72, 19 December 2013; and Centre for Legal Resources on behalf of Valentin Câmpeanu v. Romania [GC], no. 47848/08, § 147, 17 July 2014)."

39. The European Court has highlighted another important element of a human rights compatible investigation, namely, the need for the investigative authorities to seek the assistance and cooperation of other authorities if and when the latter might have in their possession information and/or resources of relevance to the former's efforts to conduct an effective investigation. See, generally, Case of Güzelyurtlu and Others v. Cyprus And Turkey, Application no. 36925/07, Judgment, 29 January 2019, paras 229 and 232-233.
40. Regarding the issue of expeditiousness, the Panel wishes to note the following. Regarding its investigative obligations, the Mission is required to investigate credible allegations of human rights violations with diligence and expeditiousness, and to ensure in all cases that the investigative response of the Mission is commensurate to the gravity of the matter. In sum, the response must be such that it guarantees the effective protection of the rights at stake. See, generally, S.H. against EULEX, Decision and Findings, case no. 2016-28, 11 September 2019, para. 56; Sadiku-Syla against EULEX, 2014-34, 19 October 2016, para. 36. See also Varnava and Others v Turkey, Application no. 16064/90 et al, Judgment of 18 September 2009, para. 191; Oğur v. Turkey, Application no. 21594/93, Judgment of 20 May 1999, para. 88; Hugh Jordan v. the United Kingdom, Application no. 24746/94, Judgment 4 May 2001, paras. 105-09; Douglas-Williams v. the United Kingdom, Application no. 56413/00, Decision of 8 January 2002.
41. When the obligation of the state or authority involves a duty to investigate, the requirement of expeditiousness applies to all stages and aspects of the investigation: its instigation, its conduct and its completion. The requirement of expeditiousness is relative in nature: it depends on the circumstances of each case, in particular the challenges posed by the case, the difficulties to access witnesses or to collect information. (See S.H. against EULEX, Decision and Findings, case no. 2016-28, 11 September 2019, para. 57). But investigative challenges and difficulties do not authorise procrastination, delays or unjustifiable slowness in the performance of investigative duties. This is an expression of the broader right to proceedings without undue delay, which is guaranteed to all parties to judicial proceedings. See, again, S.H. against EULEX, Decision and Findings, case no. 2016-28, 11 September 2019, para. 57. The Panel has thus pointed out that –

“The right to a fair and public hearing within a reasonable time as understood under Article 6 (1) of the Convention is designed to protect “all parties to court proceedings....against excessive procedural delays ...In addition, in criminal cases the right is designed to avoid that a person charged should remain too long in a state of uncertainty about his fate” [...]” (Maksutaj against EULEX, 2014-18, 12 November 2015, para. 57, it’s quotes are from Stögmüller v Austria, Application no. 1602/62, judgment of 10 November 1969, para 5; reiterated in S.H. against EULEX, Decision and Findings, case no. 2016-28, 11 September 2019, para. 57).

42. In evaluating, in a particular case, the reasonableness of time taken by the authorities to investigate alleged rights violations, a number of factors have been identified as particularly important, including these: (1) the complexity of the case, (2) the conduct of the applicant, and (3) the conduct of the competent administration (Maksutaj against EULEX, 2014-18, 12 November 2015, para. 58, and its references to König v FRG, Application no. 6232/73, Judgment of 28 June 1978, para. 99, Pedersen and Baadsgaard v. Denmark, Application no. 49017/99, Judgment of 17 December 2004, para. 45; see also, Thomas Rüsche against EULEX, 2013-21, 11 January 2017, para. 59-65; S.H. against EULEX, Decision and Findings, case no. 2016-28, 11 September 2019, para. 58). An examination of the consequence of the delays on the parties involved might also provide relevant evidence of the reasonableness or otherwise of delays in the process (Maksutaj against EULEX, 2014-18, 12 November 2015, paras. 64-66 and references cited; S.H. against EULEX, Decision and Findings, case no. 2016-28, 11 September 2019, para. 58).
43. A strict commitment and attachment to those standards is particularly important for a Rule of Law mission operating in a post-conflict context, such as EULEX Kosovo, that is intended to serve as an example of society’s commitment to ending impunity and building into it a sense of accountability for serious violations of rights. (See S.H. against EULEX, Decision and Findings, case no. 2016-28, 11 September 2019, para. 55). Any standard short of the one mentioned above would risk creating a sense of acquiescence with impunity and disregard for a victims’ search for justice and accountability (S.H. against EULEX, Decision and Findings, case no. 2016-28, 11 September 2019, para. 55; L.O. against EULEX, 2014-32, Decision and Findings, 11 November 2015, para. 46; Sadiku-Syla against EULEX, 2014-34, Decision and Findings, 19 October 2016, para. 37; see also Varnava and Others v. Turkey, Application no. 16064/90 et al, Judgment of 18 September 2009, para. 191; Palić v. Bosnia and Herzegovina, Application no.

4704/04, Judgment of 15 February 2011, para. 63; HRAP decision in cases nos 248/09, 250/09 and 251/09, 25 April 2013, para. 80).

44. It should also be emphasized for present purposes that the rights subject to the present complaint are among the most important of all fundamental rights. They touch upon core interests of the alleged victims and must be guaranteed in all circumstances. The practice of enforced disappearance constitutes an egregious violation of these rights. This is reflected, inter alia, in the fact that the practice of “enforced disappearance” is now regarded and characterized as a crime against humanity, in particular, in the Statute of the International Criminal Court (Rome Statute, Article 7(1)(i)) and in the Law on Specialist Chambers and Specialist Prosecutor’s Office (Law No.05/L-053) (Article 13(1)(i)). See also S.H. against EULEX, Decision and Findings, case no. 2016-28, 11 September 2019, para. 59.
45. The implications of the changes in the mandate of the Mission following the closure of the Mission in June 2018 and the implications thereof for the purpose of this case are addressed briefly below.

Cases of “enforced disappearance” in the context of the Mission’s mandate

46. The HoM does not dispute that the Mission was competent to investigate this case and could have done so in the exercise of its jurisdictional competence.
47. The Panel has already determined that this sort of cases comes within the executive mandate and investigative/prosecutorial competence of the Mission. See, e.g., D.W., E.V., F.U., G.T., Zlata Veselinović, H.S., I.R. against EULEX, 2014-11 to 2014-17, Decision on Admissibility, 30 September 2015; Sadiku-Syla against EULEX, 2014-34, Decision on Admissibility, 29 September 2015; Zlata Veselinović, H.S., I.R. against EULEX, 2014-11 to 2014-17, Decision on Admissibility, 30 September 2015; L.O. against EULEX, 2014-32, Decision and Findings, 11 November 2015; S.H. against EULEX, Decision and Findings, case no. 2016-28, 11 September 2019.
48. Where acts such as enforced disappearance are committed in the general context of an armed conflict, as was the case in this instance, the conduct in question could qualify as a war crime, crimes against humanity or ethnic-based crimes over which the Mission had specific and express jurisdictional competence under its then applicable mandate. See, generally, Article 3 (d) of the Council joint action. See also Sadiku-Syla against EULEX, 2014-34, 19 October 2016, paras. 44-46. In D.W. et al, the Panel said the following in relations to this matter, which is also relevant to the present case:

‘there was a very real possibility that those crimes and the accompanying violations of rights were based on ethnic or religious considerations thereby going further into the jurisdictional territory over which the Mission has competence. In a post-conflict environment where ethnic and religious relations might still be tense and fragile, such cases are obvious investigative priorities.’

See D.W., E.V., F.U., G.T., Zlata Veselinović, H.S., and I.R. against EULEX, 2014-11 to 2014-17, 19 October 2016, paras. 83 et seq, in particular para. 85.

49. The investigation of this sort of cases did not only form part of the Mission's mandate, but was a core and essential element thereof. In L.O. against EULEX, the Panel thus underlined that –

‘there can be little argument that investigating the fate of the disappeared – regardless of religion or ethnicity – must be and must remain an operational priority for EULEX as a Rule of Law Mission for which it must be provided with adequate resources’

L.O. against EULEX, case No. 2014-32, Decision and Findings, 11 November 2015, para. 47. See also S.H. against EULEX, Decision and Findings, case no. 2016-28, 11 September 2019.

50. The above considerations will serve to assess the efforts made by the Mission in relation to the present case and whether these efforts may be said to be consistent with the Mission's overall mandate and its human rights obligations.

Circumstances in which the Mission was to fulfill its human rights responsibilities

51. For reasons outlined above, the Mission is not to be assessed against standards of perfection. It faced at the time a challenging post-conflict environment. Its resources were limited and these were, in some respects, inadequate to the task and expectations. This required the Mission to make choices and to prioritise certain efforts over others.
52. Furthermore, the manner in which UNMIK conducted its own investigative efforts and the manner in which it transferred its files to EULEX greatly complicated the work of the Mission. In response, the Mission invested time, resources and energy into reviewing those records and trying to make sense of them. For these efforts, the Mission must be commended.
53. In the assessment of the present complaint, the Panel has taken into account the difficulties necessarily involved in the investigation of war-related crimes in a post-conflict society such as Kosovo (L.O. against EULEX, 2014-32, 11 November 2015, para. 44 and references cited therein; S.H. against EULEX, Decision and Findings, case no. 2016-28, 11 September 2019, para. 51; see also Palić v. Bosnia and Herzegovina, application no. 4704/04, Judgment of 15 February 2011, para. 70; and HRAP decision in cases nos. 248/09, 250/09 and 251/09, quoted above, paras. 44 and 62 et seq). Those difficulties should not, however, serve to camouflage or justify investigative failures that are not in any meaningful manner connected with the said difficulties. The Panel will, therefore, evaluate in each case whether a particular investigative step that was normally open to EULEX would have been rendered impractical by reasons associated with post-conflict circumstances independent of those conducting the investigation (L.O. against EULEX, 2014-32, Decision and Findings, 11 November 2015, para. 44; S.H. against EULEX, Decision and Findings, case no. 2016-28, 11 September 2019, para. 51).

54. Particularly relevant in assessing the adequacy of the Mission's response is the fact that its ability to fulfill its – investigative – obligations was affected by both the general circumstances in which crimes were committed and by UNMIK's conduct in the aftermath of these crimes. Crimes committed in the context of an armed conflict are almost always a challenge to investigate. The challenge often remains in the immediate aftermath of a conflict because evidence might be destroyed and the willingness and ability of witnesses to provide information might be considerably reduced in such context. The Panel has duly taken into account these challenges when making its own assessment of the Mission's response. See, again, S.H. against EULEX, Decision and Findings, case no. 2016-28, 11 September 2019, paras 52-53.
55. The Panel has also taken into consideration the fact that EULEX Kosovo had to confront and address the investigative legacy of UNMIK. The Human Rights Advisory Panel of the United Nations (HRAP) found that UNMIK failed in many respects to fulfill its human rights obligations in relation to victims of "enforced disappearances" on a number of occasions. The proper, diligent and organized accounting of information pertaining to the commission of such serious violations of rights is an important element of the effective protection of those rights. The Panel has taken into consideration those circumstances when assessing the conduct of the Mission and the challenges it faced. S.H. against EULEX, Decision and Findings, case no. 2016-28, 11 September 2019, para. 53.

Findings regarding the Mission's alleged failures

56. As noted above, there is no question that the Mission operated in difficult circumstances for much of the time of concern to this case.
57. It is also clear from the record of this case that the Mission took a number of steps relevant to the present complaint. In particular, it took active steps to review and organise records received from UNMIK. And the Institute of Forensic Medicine was directly involved in the attempt to locate the complainant's relative or his remains, as was the case with every instance of a disappeared person reported to the authorities.
58. These efforts did not, however, do enough to protect and guarantee the effectiveness of the fundamental rights of the complainant and his grandfather. The Panel has identified a number of shortcomings in the Mission's conduct that have resulted in or contributed to the violation of the rights of the complainant:
  - i. A failure to fully and diligently investigate the case, involving, inter alia, a failure to properly coordinate between the Mission's organs; and
  - ii. A failure to sufficiently involve and inform close relatives of the disappeared person.

Investigation of the disappearance of the complainant's relative

59. As a preliminary matter, the Panel wishes to highlight the distinction between the question of competence to investigate and that of an obligation to do so. The competence of the Mission to investigate crimes that involve the violation of certain human rights – and the scope thereof – has been determined by a succession of domestic laws, in particular, the Law on Jurisdiction in its various iterations. As for the Mission's obligation to investigate these, it arises not from these provisions which set out EULEX Prosecutors' jurisdictional competence over these cases, but from Articles 2 and 3 of the European Convention on Human Rights (and similar human rights provisions), which mandates the Mission to guarantee the effectiveness of these rights in the context of its executive function. See e.g. D.W., E.V., F.U., G.T., Zlata Veselinović, H.S., I.R. against EULEX, 2014-11 to 2014-17, 30 September 2015, paras 84 et seq. See also, for an illustration of the application of that general notion: Case of Gudiel Alvarez et al. ("Diario Militar") v. Guatemala (Jdgt of 20.11.2012; Merits, Reparations and costs), in particular, paras 192, 231-232. See also S.H. against EULEX, Decision and Findings, case no. 2016-28, 11 September 2019, para. 83.

60. In fulfilling its executive mandate, the Mission is therefore required to interpret its competence – the nature and scope thereof – in line and in a manner consistent with its human rights obligations. The Panel will first consider the issue of the Mission's competence to investigate cases such as the one under consideration.
61. Until 15 April 2014, EULEX Kosovo had unfettered competence to investigate this sort of cases (see Law No. 03/L-053 on the Jurisdiction, Case Selection and Case Allocation of EULEX Judges and Prosecutors in Kosovo, Article 3, and Law No. 03/L-052 on the Special Prosecution Office of the Republic of Kosovo). The Panel has already pointed out in past decisions that this sort of crimes could – and, indeed, in some cases, were – investigated as war crimes or ethnically-motivated crimes. Therefore, from the beginning of its mandate until April 2014 (i.e., including the period post-acquittal, 2007-2014), the Mission was indeed competent to investigate or continue to investigate this case. See S.H. against EULEX, Decision and Findings, case no. 2016-28, 11 September 2019, para. 85.
62. On 15 April 2014, the scope of competence of EULEX prosecutors was narrowed down and limited to “ongoing cases”, i.e., cases that had been opened by EULEX prior to that time (see Law No. 04/L-273 on Amending and Supplementing the Laws Related to the Mandate of EULEX, Article 3.3). The Panel notes the following regarding the period between April 2014 and June 2018: First, the decision whether or not to open a new case laid with EULEX prosecutors (in cooperation with competent local authorities) where exceptional circumstances exist. Therefore, the decision not to open or re-open an investigation of this case was one taken – expressly or implicitly – by EULEX prosecutors. See also X. and 115 Others Against EULEX, Case No. 2011-20, Decision and Findings, 22 April 2015, paras. 60-67; S.H. against EULEX, Decision and Findings, case no. 2016-28, 11 September 2019, para. 86.
63. Secondly, in line with the Mission's obligations under the OPLAN, that obligation must be interpreted in light of the Mission's human rights obligations. Considering that the violation of the victims' rights and those of the complainant was ongoing, it fell to the Mission to ensure that those rights were effectively protected and their violation duly remedied. The acquittal of those initially charged with this crime did not put an end to the Mission's obligation in that regard. Considering, in particular, the gravity of the violation of the complainant's rights and the ongoing nature of this violation, the continued investigation of this case was neither “illogical” nor “theoretical” as the Mission seeks to portray it but a legal obligation of the Mission that was further heightened by gravity of the case at hand. See also S.H. against EULEX, Decision and Findings, case no. 2016-28, 11 September 2019, para. 87.
64. Furthermore, the Law on Jurisdiction applicable during that period (April 2014-June 2018) contained a clause whereby the Mission could exercise competence over cases (i.e., those not “ongoing” as of May 2014) where “extraordinary circumstances” existed. The Panel has already had occasion to interpret this notion. It has interpreted it in a manner that gives effect to the Mission's overall responsibility to guarantee the effective protection of human rights in the context of its executive mandate. Thus, in Sadiku-Syla, the Panel said the following:

"[T]he HoM submits that the new legislation that entered into force on 17 May 2014 has "considerably reduced the possibility for EULEX Prosecutors and Judges to exercise executing functions in new cases" (Response, page 6, referring to the Omnibus Law that amended the Law on Jurisdiction). The Panel notes, however, that Article 7(A) provides for "Authority of EULEX prosecutors in extraordinary circumstances": "In extraordinary circumstances a case will be assigned to a EULEX prosecutor by a joint decision of the Chief State Prosecutor and EULEX KOSOVO competent authority." The HoM has failed to explain why this provision would not provide an adequate legal basis on which EULEX Prosecutors should act, in particular in a case such as the present one where the local authorities do not appear to be investigating. The Panel would invite the parties to address this matter should they wish to make additional submissions in regard to the merit of this case."

See Sadiku-Syla against EULEX, 2014-34, 29 September 2015, para. 62. See also, D.W., E.V., F.U., G.T., Zlata Veselinović, H.S., I.R. against EULEX, 2014-11 to 2014-17, 30 September 2015, para. 90; Sadiku-Syla against EULEX, 2014-34, 19 October 2016, paras. 23 et seq; S.H. against EULEX, Decision and Findings, case no. 2016-28, 11 September 2019, para. 88.

65. In contrast, it is apparent from the record of cases coming before the Panel – including the present one – that EULEX has failed in many instances to treat this sort of cases as investigative priorities or, at the very least, to commit the time and resources necessary to conduct timely and effective investigations of those cases. See, e.g., Sadiku-Syla against EULEX, 2014-34, Decision on Admissibility, 29 September 2015, paras. 34- 39; D.W., E.V., F.U., G.T., Zlata Veselinović, H.S., I.R. against EULEX, 2014-11 to 2014-17, Decision on Admissibility, 30 September 2015, paras. 72-76; L.O. against EULEX, 2014-32, Decision and Findings, 11 November 2015, paras. 43- 47, and 59-65; Sadiku-Syla against EULEX, 2014-34, Decision and Findings, 19 October 2016, paras.47; D.W., E.V., F.U., G.T., Zlata Veselinović, H.S., I.R. against EULEX, 2014-11 to 2014-17, Decision and findings, 19 October 2016, paras. 58, 60, 62-65, 81-82; and S.H. against EULEX, Decision and Findings, case no. 2016-28, 11 September 2019, para. 72.
66. In this particular case, the Mission effectively acknowledges its failure to investigate this case. It points out, however, that the Institute of Forensic Medicine was and remained involved in this matter for quite some time. The involvement of the Institute of Forensic Medicine into this matter is indeed to be acknowledged and did go some way towards fulfilling the Mission's obligations. However, the Institute's responsibility was purely forensic in the sense of seeking to locate and identify the remains of the complainant's relative. This does not qualify as or fulfill the requirement that the authorities should investigate and elucidate the circumstances in which an individual disappeared and bring those responsible to justice.
67. In that sense, whilst the Mission took some steps towards the fulfillment of its obligations in this case, these efforts were not enough to meet the human rights standards set out above that were binding on the Mission at the time.

68. The Panel notes furthermore that a lack of clear priorities might have negatively affected the Mission's ability to focus on cases of this sort. Also unfortunate is the Mission's reliance upon UNMIK's own classification of cases as open/closed and war crimes/missing persons cases. UNMIK's classification of cases appears to have been carried out without a full and proper investigation of cases having first been attempted or carried out and without in many cases relatives of disappeared having been contacted or informed. The Mission should have conducted their own evaluation and investigation and not based their decisions whether to commence an investigation on what information might have already been in an UNMIK file.
69. Furthermore, the Panel notes that little or no effort was made in cases of this sort and, in particular, in this case, to reach out to other institutions and organisations (such as the ICRC; ICTY; NGOs; state authorities) which might have had information in their possession about these cases or expertise relevant to assisting the Mission's investigative efforts.
70. Therefore, prior to deciding not to investigate a case, the Mission would have been expected to exhaust all reasonable avenues of information, including by contacting relatives of the disappeared person to ascertain whether they possessed relevant information about the case.

Informing relatives of the disappeared

71. Because of the effect of such acts upon close relatives of a disappeared, it is of fundamental importance that they should be involved in the investigation of such cases to the greatest possible extent. S.H. against EULEX, Decision and Findings, case no. 2016-28, 11 September 2019, para. 66.
72. Investigative authorities are required as a matter of human rights law to keep victims of such violations informed of the course of their investigation. In effect, this requires that they balance the rights and interests of victims to be kept informed of the progress of the investigation with the necessary degree of confidentiality that an investigation may legitimately require. Subject to legitimate considerations of confidentiality and security, victims are entitled to be sufficiently involved in- and informed of the process of investigation. Whilst the exact tenor of what must be provided to them is hard to determine in the abstract, the information provided to those most directly concerned by the investigation must be such as to enable them to satisfy themselves that the matter is being duly and properly looked into and that all relevant and reasonable efforts are being made to establish the fate of their relative and identify those responsible for it. See, generally, S.H. against EULEX, Decision and Findings, case no. 2016-28, 11 September 2019, para. 66; Desanka and Zoran Stanisic against EULEX, 2012-22, 11 November 2015, para. 66; L.O. against EULEX, 2014-32, 11 November 2015, paras. 60-61, 72-73; HRRP, Case-Law Note on the Duty to Investigate Allegations of Violations of Rights, pp 28-30; see also Ahmet Özkan and Others v. Turkey, Application no. 21689/93, ECtHR Judgment of 6 April 2004, paras. 311-314, Isayeva v. Russia, Application no. 57950/00, ECtHR Judgment of 24 February 2005 paras. 211-214; Al-Skeini and Others v. United Kingdom, Application no. 55721/07, ECtHR Judgment of 7 July 2011, para. 167.
73. This obligation to keep close relatives abreast of investigative efforts is particularly important in a case involving acts of enforced disappearance as surviving relatives might have no other source of information regarding the fate of their relative(s) and they will continue to live in the hope that the fate of their relative(s) will one day be elucidated. As a result, close relatives of the disappeared victims suffer emotionally from the absence of information regarding the fate of their loved one. (See Zufe Miladinović against EULEX, 2017-02, 19 June 2019, para. 87; S.H. against EULEX, Decision and Findings, case no. 2016-28, 11 September 2019, para. 78). Such a requirement is a necessary element of the protection of the rights of the victims in the investigation of such a case. See, e.g., S.H. against EULEX, Decision and Findings, case no. 2016-28, 11 September 2019, para. 77; Desanka and Zoran Stanisic against EULEX, 2012-22, 11 November 2015, para. 66, referring to L.O. against EULEX, 2014-32, 11 November 2015, paras. 60-61, 72-74; Zufe Miladinović against EULEX, 2017-02, 19 June 2019, para. 86; see also Ahmet Özkan and Others v. Turkey, Application no. 21689/93, ECtHR Judgment of 6 April 2004, paras. 311-314, Isayeva v. Russia, Application no. 57950/00, ECtHR Judgment of 24 February 2005 paras. 211-214; Al-Skeini and Others v. United Kingdom, Application no. 55721/07, ECtHR Judgment of 7 July 2011, para. 167. And competent authorities will not easily be permitted to disregard or ignore it. See S.H. against EULEX, Decision and Findings, case no. 2016-28, 11 September 2019, para. 67.

74. Also relevant in this context is the right to truth, which emanates from other recognised categories of human rights. Highlighting the right to truth in this context, the General Comment of the Working Group on Enforced Disappearance says the following about this matter:

“Article 13 of the Declaration recognizes the obligation of the State to investigate cases of enforced disappearances. Paragraph 4 of Article 13 specifies that “the findings of such an investigation shall be made available upon request to all interested persons, unless doing so would jeopardize an ongoing criminal investigation.” In light of the developments that happened since 1992, the Working Group deems that the restriction in the last part of this paragraph should be interpreted narrowly. Indeed, the relatives of the victims should be closely associated with an investigation into a case of enforced disappearance. The refusal to provide information is a limitation on the right to the truth. Such a limitation must be strictly proportionate to the only legitimate aim: to avoid jeopardizing an ongoing criminal investigation. A refusal to provide any information, or to communicate with the relatives at all, in other words a blanket refusal, is a violation of the right to the truth. Providing general information on procedural matters, such as the fact that the matter has been given to a judge for examination, is insufficient and should be considered a violation of the right to the truth. The State has the obligation to let any interested person know the concrete steps taken to clarify the fate and the whereabouts of the person. Such information must include the steps taken on the basis of the evidence provided by the relatives or other witnesses. While the necessities of a criminal investigation may justify restricting the transmission of certain information, there must be recourse in the national legislation to review such a refusal to provide the information to all interested persons. This review should be available at the time of the initial refusal to provide information, and then on a regular basis to ensure that the reason for the necessity that was invoked by the public authority to refuse to communicate, remains present.”

See General Comment on the Right to the Truth in Relation to Enforced Disappearance, Report of the Working Group on Enforced or Involuntary Disappearances (2010), Document A/HRC/16/48, para 3; Zufe Miladinović against EULEX, 2017-02, 19 June 2019, para. 87; and, also, I. Case of the Rio Negro Massacres v. Guatemala (IAcTtHR) (Jdgt of 4.09.2012, Prelimin. objection, merits, repair and costs), para. 265. See also S.H. against EULEX, Decision and Findings, case no. 2016-28, 11 September 2019, para. 78.

75. In relation to the present case, there is no indication on the record of the Mission having fulfilled its obligation to inform the complainant of the existence, course, and tenor of an investigation of the case.
76. The Mission did not provide an explanation for its failure to keep the complainant (or any other close relative of the primary victim) informed about this case. In response to the Panel's query on that point, the Mission said the following:
- 'Overall, the Mission should have done more outreach efforts to keep victims and the wider public informed about its strategies and approaches, with a view to manage expectations more adequately and be more transparent. However, in the present case and in considering the fundamental obstacles presented, the Mission does not believe that the complainant's rights were violated.'
77. The Mission's obligation towards this category of victim does not pertain to 'strategies' or 'approaches'. Nor is it about outreach. It pertains to the right of victims of such a violation of their rights to be specifically informed about what the authorities are doing to elucidate the matter and to bring those responsible to justice. By failing to reach out to the complainant and to even try to do so, the Mission did in fact violate his rights.
78. The Mission's failure to contact and inform the complainant of their decision not to investigate this case contributed to the violation of the complainant's rights insofar as it added to the state of uncertainty in which he found himself all through the relevant period.

The Mission's new, reduced, mandate since June 2018

79. The Mission's new mandate, which entered into force in June 2018, has significantly reduced the Mission's ability to affect the investigation of criminal cases, including this one. Its new monitoring role does not enable it to request the commencement of an investigation, nor does it give it power to decide its course. S.H. against EULEX, Decision and Findings, case no. 2016-28, 11 September 2019, para. 96.
80. The Panel considers that the change in nature of the Mission's mandate does not relieve the Mission from its obligation to redress as far as possible the effects of violations for which it is determined to be responsible. See also S.H. against EULEX, Decision and Findings, case no. 2016-28, 11 September 2019, para. 99; and Council Decision (CFSP) 2018/856 of 8 June 2018.
81. On that basis, the Panel will recommend that the Mission should further take active steps to inquire with the authorities what measures, if any, are being taken to investigate this case and to report to the competent authorities in Brussels if it becomes apparent that local authorities are not fulfilling their obligations in that regard. Having failed to protect the complainant's rights, the Mission must now take steps to seek to remedy these violations.

Consequences upon the rights of the complainant

82. Article 2 of the Convention protects one of the most fundamental of human rights, namely, the right to life. That right is protected under a variety of human rights instruments and it constitutes a core, basic, element of the minimum human rights protection owed to any individual. It knows of only few, limited, exceptions. See, generally, General Comment No. 36 (2018) on Article 6 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, on the right to life, CCPR/C/GC/36, 30 October 2018 (https://tbinternet.ohchr.org/Treaties/CCPR/Shared%20Documents/1\_Global/CCPR\_C\_GC\_36\_8785\_E.pdf) (hereafter, “General Comment 36”); S.H. against EULEX, Decision and Findings, case no. 2016-28, 11 September 2019, para. 106.

83. Most importantly for present purposes, this right imports a procedural obligation on the part of the state or authority competent to investigate where they know or should have known of potentially unlawful deprivations of life, to investigate and, where appropriate, prosecute such incidents including allegations of excessive use of force with lethal consequences. See, generally, Sadiku-Syla against EULEX, 2014-34, Decision and Findings, 19 October 2016; D.W., E.V., F.U., G.T., Zlata Veselinović, H.S., I.R. against EULEX, 2014-11 to 2014-17, Decision on Admissibility, 30 September 2015; Sadiku-Syla against EULEX, 2014-34, Decision on Admissibility, 29 September 2015; S.H. against EULEX, Decision and Findings, case no. 2016-28, 11 September 2019, para. 107; see also Nydia Erika Bautista de Arellana v. Colombia, Communication No. 563/1993, Views of the Human Rights Committee, 27 October 1995 para. 8.6; McCann and Others v. the United Kingdom, ECtHR Judgment of 27 September 1995, Series A no. 324, para. 161; Assenov and Others v. Bulgaria, ECtHR Judgment of 28 October 1998, Reports of Judgments and Decisions 1998-VIII, para. 102; Nachova and Others v Bulgaria, Application nos. 43577/98 and 43579/98, ECtHR Judgment of 6 July 2005, para. 110; Hugh Jordan v. the United Kingdom, Application no. 24746/94, ECtHR Judgment 4 May 2001, para. 105; General Comment 36, para. 27; Human Rights Council, Concluding Observations: Kyrgyzstan (2014), para. 13.
84. Investigations and prosecutions of potentially unlawful deprivations of life should be undertaken in accordance with relevant international standards, including the Minnesota Protocol on the Investigation of Potentially Unlawful Death (2016), and must be aimed at ensuring that those responsible are brought to justice, at promoting accountability and preventing impunity, at avoiding denial of justice and at drawing necessary lessons for revising practices and policies with a view to avoiding repeated violations. See, generally, General Comment 36, para. 27 and references cited; and S.H. against EULEX, Decision and Findings, case no. 2016-28, 11 September 2019, para. 108.
85. Also relevant to the present case is Article 3 of the European Convention of Human Rights, which provides that no one shall be subjected to torture or to inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment. A similar prohibition and guarantee is provided in many other human rights instruments, including Article 7 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and Article 2 of the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment. This is again a fundamental right of immense importance that must be protected at all times and circumstances.
86. It has been acknowledged in the jurisprudence of the Panel and in the practice of other human rights bodies that the emotional trauma that result for relatives of a disappeared from the absence of information regarding the fate of their relative could reach the threshold of gravity required for this guarantee. (See, e.g., L.O. against EULEX, 2014-

32, Decision and Findings, 11 November 2015; D.W., E.V., F.U., G.T., Zlata Veselinović, H.S., I.R. against EULEX, 2014-11 to 2014-17, Decision on Admissibility, 30 September 2015; Sadiku-Syla against EULEX, 2014-34, Decision and Findings, 19 October 2016; S.H. against EULEX, Decision and Findings, case no. 2016-28, 11 September 2019. See also Declaration on the Protection of All Persons from Enforced Disappearance, 5th Preambular paragraph (noting that enforced disappearance causes “anguish and sorrow”) and Article 1(2) which provides that “[a]ny act of enforced disappearance (...) constitutes a violation of the rules of international law guaranteeing, (...) the right not to be subjected to torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment”; and General Comment on the right to the truth in relation to enforced disappearance, Report of the Working Group on Enforced or Involuntary Disappearances, 2010. Document A/HRC/16/48, para. 4.

87. The essence of the violation of Article 3 of the Convention with regard to a family member is related to the “reactions and attitudes” of the authorities, rather than the fact that their family member disappeared. To make a determination of a violation of Article 3 of the European Convention in relation to a close family member of the disappeared person, there are factors that give the complainant’s suffering “a dimension and character distinct from the emotional distress which may be regarded as inevitably caused to relatives of a victim of a serious human rights violation. Such factors include “the proximity of the family tie – in that context, a certain weight will attach to the parent-child bond –, the particular circumstances of the relationship, the extent to which the family member witnessed the events in question, the involvement of the family member in the attempts to obtain information about the disappeared person and the way in which the authorities responded to those enquiries”. See Çakıcı v. Turkey, ECtHR Judgment of 8 July 1999, Reports of Judgments and Decisions of 1999-IV, para. 98.
88. In the view of the Panel, the Mission’s failure to a) adequately coordinate among its organs to ensure that all relevant information was shared before a decision was taken to investigate this case, b) to keep close relatives informed of the actions of the Mission in relation to this case and c) to use all available investigative means to try to resolve this case all contributed to violating the rights of the complainant under Article 2 of the Convention to have this matter fully and diligently investigated by the Mission. This is despite the Mission having invested significant resources to try to locate the complainant’s relative or his remains, which is to be acknowledged.
89. These culpable failures and omissions listed above also contributed to the violation of the complainant’s rights under Article 3 of the Convention and contributed to the emotional and psychological trauma resulting from not knowing what happened to his grandfather. That trauma is grave, durable and ongoing. It is not, of course, exclusively the consequence of the Mission’s conduct, but the Panel is not competent to make determinations regarding UNMIK’s responsibility in that regard. In any case, UNMIK’s failure, however serious, would not excuse the Mission’s own. Therefore, the findings made here are limited to those acts and failures of the Mission that contributed to the violation of the complainant’s rights, having taken into consideration the challenges outlined above which the Mission faced at the time.

90. In light of the findings made above in relation to Articles 2 and 3 of the Convention, the Panel does not feel that it needs to also make findings in relation to Articles 8 and 13 of the Convention. The Panel notes, however, that whilst the interest(s) protected by each provision overlap in part, they are not identical. The Panel notes, furthermore, that the conduct imputed to the Mission appears prima facie to have negatively affected the complainant's rights to family life and his right to an effective remedy. The Panel will not make definite findings in respect of these rights as its findings in relation to Articles 2 and 3 encapsulate what it regards as the core features of the violations imputed to the Mission.
91. Based on the above, the Panel has determined that the Mission has violated the fundamental rights of the complainant pursuant to Article 2 (procedural limb) and Article 3 of the European Convention on Human Rights.

FOR THESE REASONS, THE PANEL UNANIMOUSLY

FINDS that the Mission has violated the rights of the complainant as guaranteed by Article 2 (procedural limb) and 3 of the European Convention of Human Rights;

IN THAT LIGHT, THE PANEL DOES NOT FIND IT NECESSARY to make determinations regarding possible violations by the Mission of Articles 8 and 13 of the Convention;

NOTES that, based on the record available to the Panel, the violation of the complainant's right might be ongoing; and, therefore,

RECOMMENDS the following:

- i. Considering the gravity of the violations under consideration, the Panel invites the Head of Mission to carefully consider the possibility and the need for the Mission to acknowledge the violation of the complainant and her father's rights committed by the Mission;
- ii. The Panel invites the Mission to ensure that the case-file pertaining to this case and the present Decision are sent to the competent local authorities;
- iii. The Panel recommends that this case should be subject to monitoring by the Mission;
- iv. In relation to cases of enforced disappearances, the Panel recommends that the Mission should emphasise to the local authorities the importance of the victims' rights to the truth, the fact that the violation is ongoing, and to indicate that it welcomes information on the general course of the investigation;
- v. The Panel recommends that the Mission should report to the competent authorities in Brussels if it becomes apparent that local authorities are not fulfilling their obligations in that regard;
- vi. The Mission should take active steps to inquire with the authorities what steps, if any, are being taken to investigate this case and to report to the competent authorities of the European Union in Brussels if it becomes apparent that the authorities are not fulfilling their obligations in that regard;

- vii. The Panel recommends that the present decision should be provided to the relevant organs of the Mission; and
- viii. The Panel also recommends that the Head of Mission should ensure that the monitoring activities of the Mission should be conducted in a manner consistent with the Mission's human rights obligations and that it ensures that this part of its mandate contributes to the effective protection and promotion of those rights.

THE PANEL RESPECTFULLY ASKS THE MISSION to report upon the implementation of these recommendations at its earliest convenience and no later than 15 May 2020.
